Autism is...

... a lifelong developmental disability affecting social and communication skills. It knows no social or ethnic barriers and affects about 91 in every 10,000. Many of those with Autistic Spectrum Disorders (ASD) remain undiagnosed. People with autism often have accompanying learning disabilities but in all cases share a common difficulty in making sense of the world in the way others do. The pin-people chart overleaf shows some of the characteristics associated with autism.

The effect on the family can be traumatic. Family life is disrupted by such unpredictable and anti-social behaviour and there is, for all parents, the ceaseless worry about what will happen when they become too old and frail to take care of their child themselves.

The National Autistic Society
West Cumbria Branch

Was formed by parents, to provide mutual support and to ensure that children, young people and adults with Autism have access to appropriate education and care services.

- We hold regular meetings for parents / carers to exchange information, views and provide support for each other
- We lobby and negotiate with local education, social services and health authorities to enhance provision.
- Funding permitting, we provide specific services where there is a gap identified in local provision. E.G. Sports Activities, Play-schemes etc.

Early diagnosis is essential if a person with autism is to achieve full potential. It is only when their disability is understood that they can be helped to maximise skills and minimise problems.
